

Join Jane Street's Blotto Blitz @ SNU

Blotto Blitz is a fast-paced, live take on the classic Blotto game from game theory. Players each command an army of soldiers that must be individually divided across a set of castles — at each castle, the larger force wins. Sounds simple enough, except that the scoring rules change drastically from round to round, and your score at one castle could potentially even affect your score at others!

Unlike its longer-running sibling Colonel Blotto, which is played over the course of several days, Blotto Blitz compresses the action into a single session of rapid-fire rounds, each just minutes long. With no eliminations, every player stays in the fight from start to finish, and the standings can shift at any moment. It's a test of strategic creativity on the fly, with just enough chaos to keep things interesting.
